

HIGHLIGHTS

Dear fellow sojourners:

2014 has gotten off to a fast start. What a privilege and a blessing it has been to serve alongside you! It has already been an incredibly hectic 10 weeks with three teams from the USA, already. We have done two major agricultural outreaches with ministry to over 1,000 farmers. We have had medical and evangelistic outreaches in several villages and towns, planted a new church in Yaoundé and are putting together a core group for a new church plant near the University of Buea. All of these have been made possible by your prayers and loyal support!

the things we do.

Over the past five decades, Africa's preoccupation with development has had only marginal success. Today, most Africans are worse off than they were. Health and nutrition problems are widespread. As many of you already know, it has been our desire to build ministries that can affect every

I had just finished working on our 2013 annual report and ready to send to press when my laptop crashed. Given our present budgetary constraints, it may take two to three months or more before I am able to get another laptop. I will be contacting a computer specialist next week to see if they can retrieve my documents. Whatever the case, I will start working on another annual report to be sent out soon.

Meanwhile, I want to give you a quick update about our upcoming event in Jacksonville, and solicit your prayers and financial support. I have enclosed a brochure about our upcoming missions' banquet as well as a small brochure that attempts to capture some of spectrum of the African life – bridging the gaps, changing mindsets and transforming our world to the standard of Christ! With the jobless situation in our part of the world, we are seeking to build a number of regional ministry bases that will provide ministry opportunities, create jobs, while simultaneously generating income for continuity.

The first of such bases is in Dimako, among the marginalized Baka Pygmy community. We have acquired over 250 acres of land and are embarking on a "demonstration" or "experimental farm" dubbed "Beulahland" Farms. Among the many items on our 'wish' list this year is our hopes to acquire a water drilling machine. A typical bore hole here costs between $10,000 and $16,000. We recently found out that we can buy a portable water drilling machine for around $15,000. I will ask my board for permission to use all funds raised at our upcoming banquet to buy a water drilling machine or tool. This will be an immense help in our new base in Dimako. It will also be used to provide water to others in communities around Cameroon at an affordable price. Kindly join us in making a one-time gift towards this. Please send all support to:

Learning trip with some of our newly employed Dimako farm workers to the largest plantain research center in the world at Njombe near Douala. Many of this guys are in their late 20s or early 30s. This is the first time they are gainfully employed and they are so happy.

BFL 101: God is blessing BFL with new staff and interns who are taking over some of my roles. I hold Team Building meetings every so often to acquaint them with BFL and also vision cast.
